

Future Careers at BAE

Human e-Sources Manager

A Human e-Sources Manager would use performance-based wearables or e-textiles to measure data such as cognitive workload, wellbeing and output on an ongoing basis. They might be the first to identify an employee is becoming ill or respond to other medical indicators to offer occupational support or additional training to deal with potential stressful situations.

Areas of study:

Psychology, Biology, Medical Sciences.

